Universities Cannot Escape History, But Can They Make It?

A talk by Cristina Gonzalez, professor of Spanish and Education

January 18, 2012
4:00-5:30 p.m.
Voorhies 126

Reflecting on Clark Kerr’s The Uses of the University, Gonzalez argues that universities must try to be an uplifting principle in this time of crisis. And since administrations now are focused almost exclusively on coping, it is up to faculties to lead. Please join the UC Davis Humanities Institute for this talk in its ongoing series of Conversations in the Humanities.
