Women's Suffrage

Women, Voting, and U.S. Empire

Virtual Roundtable Oct 7, 5:10-6:30pm

https://ucdavis.zoom.us/webinar/register/WN_sJoaQTDKSoaLPf3xbcJiJg

What do voting rights look like in the context of U.S. empire? The year 2020 marks the centennial celebration for the passage of U.S. women’s suffrage. Long celebrated as a victory for “American women,” this attainment of the federal right to vote left mixed legacies, given the ongoing history of settler colonialism and differential gradations of citizenship based on gender, sexuality, race, immigration, and class. Roundtable participants will discuss how their research explores these mixed legacies, as well as their collaborative work toward bringing this history to public humanities and history curricula. This event is part of the DHI’s Democracy in Crisis, Democracy in Movement(s) fall series.

With:
Faith Bennett, UC Davis
Katherine Marino, UCLA
Lisa G. Materson, UC DAvis
Judy Tzu-Chun Wu, UC Irvine